

Careers Resources for Foundation Doctors

https://www.nwpgmd.nhs.uk/careers_advice/careers

The deanery website has a section on careers which gives guidance on careers management choosing specialities application and interview process

<https://www.healthcareers.nhs.uk/career-planning>

This has general multidisciplinary careers guidance for all those working in the nhs. There is a subsection for doctors but doesn't provide much information

<https://specialtytraining.hee.nhs.uk/>

This is probably the most useful website. This contains all the information about application dates and deadlines and links to Oriol- the application platform.

It has an application handbook which contains all the information about application, shortlisting interviews and responding to offers.

Also most importantly it has a list of all the competition ratios and personal specifications for each job

<http://careers.bmj.com/careers/hospital-medical-healthcare-doctors-jobs.html>

Has some great articles and advice about applying for particular specialities. Also can search current posts

<https://www.bma.org.uk/advice/career>

Has lots of advice about careers in medicine and making applications. It also has a section about working abroad. It also contains a link for Sci-59 psychometric test which some people find useful

Careers Resources for Educational supervisors

The above resources will have the majority of the information the Foundation doctors require. If anyone is looking for resources to support them giving careers guidance there are also the following.

There is a section on the deanery website for those supporting career planning www.nwpgmd.nhs.uk/careers_advice/supporting_others_in_career_planning

Also there is a good short educational package on the London deanery which is very useful
